Dress Whites

Growing up in rural Vietnam, Hanh Merriman designed her first outfit at the age of 12 with purple polka-dot fabric given to her by her mother. She later became something of a street-style star while attending fashion weeks around the world, catching the eye of photographers (most notably the late Bill Cunningham) and magazine editors (Vanity Fair once included her on its international best-dressed list). This spring, Merriman's decades of stylish experience have culminated in the launch of her namesake collection. The 10 all-white looks mix structured forms with unexpected details, such as peeks of tulle and open backs. Made in Dallas, the collection ranges from $100 to $1,000.
